

ABSTRACT

In at least some embodiments, a system may comprise a network link adapter, wherein the network link adapter is configurable to detect when a first device transmits data targeting a second device and write the data targeting the second device to an address of a memory. The system further comprises a monitoring unit coupled to the network link adapter, the monitoring unit detects when the data is written to the address of the memory and forwards the data to the second device.